

NZSA Newsletter Report

David Huijser

- New Contributor: We welcomed a new contributor this year, Oritain, which adds valuable diversity to our content.
- Engagement with “Back-in-the-day” Section: While initial feedback on this section was positive, actual contributions have been limited. This suggests a need to explore alternative ways to encourage member participation, such as targeted calls for stories or featuring short interviews.
- Publications in 2025: Issues #92 and #93 of the NZSA Newsletter were successfully published during 2025, maintaining our regular schedule and continuing to provide members with relevant updates and insights.
- Upcoming Issue: Issue #94 is planned for publication in March 2026, and work is already underway to ensure timely delivery.
- Website Updates: Outdated information regarding the NZSA Newsletter on the website has been corrected, improving accuracy and transparency for members.
- Readership and Feedback: Overall readership remains steady, with positive feedback on the quality of content. However, engagement in contributing articles remains a challenge, which we aim to address in the coming year.
- Future Directions: We were considering introducing a new thematic section on the history Statistics in New Zealand, but it seems a lot of that information is already available.
